MEDICINAL.

TO RESIST THE ATTACK
—of the germs of Consumption, Scrofula, Grip, Malaria, and many other diseases—means fight or die for all of us. These germs are everywhere in the air we breathe.

The odds are in favor of the germs, if our liver is inactive and our blood impure. What is needed most is an increase in our fighting strength. To do this successfully you need to put on healthy flesh, rouse the liver to vigorous action, so it will throw off these germs, and purify the blood so that there will be no "weak spot," nor soil for their growth.

We claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, that it does all this in a way peculiar to itself. It is the development of germs of medical thought—it has stood the test of a quarter of a century of cures.

That is why the makers can guarantee it. In every trouble caused by torpid liver or impure blood, if the "Discovery" fails to lengthen or cure, your money is refunded.

Pretty strong reasons for trying Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. $50 if you can't be cured.

JAPANESE PILE CURE

Breckinridge's Defense.
Congressman Breckinridge has written letters to his friends in Lexington, Ky., in which he outlines his plans of defense against Miss Madeline Pollard's suit. In a letter to one of his most intimate associates Mr. Breckinridge states that he will deny the truth of the plaintiff's charge that an engagement ever existed between the two, or was ever discussed, or even hinted at by either. The defendant will deny that he ever stated that he was engaged to Miss Pollard or introduced her as his fiancée.

Colonel Breckinridge denounced as false the statement that he introduced Miss Pollard into Washington society, or in any way responsible for the imposition the gay Kentucky girl practiced on the Washington 400. As to the charge that he is the cause of the wayward girl's downfall, a flat denial will be recorded under oath. He will also declare that he is in no way responsible for her undesirable career, and asserts that he had nothing to do with her until he knew her character was not good.

It is also said that Colonel Breckinridge will propose to prove that Miss Pollard confessed to him that she had been betrayed by James Rodes, and avowed her intention of leading the life which she had pursued. Rodes paid her tuition at Sayre Institute, and called as frequently as he was permitted to see her at Mrs. Ketchum's. She would never permit Mr. Breckinridge to stay longer than 9 o'clock, and would always entertain him in the parlor with the members of the family present. She hated Rodes and called him an "old fool."

She got a position while at Mrs. Ketchum's at the Gazette office, after which she notified Rodes that she would not receive his attention any longer.

It is reported in Lexington that Miss Pollard intends to enter the theatrical profession after the trial comes off, and will interpret only romantic roles, and that a dramatist is already at work on a play for her.

According to Colonel Breckinridge, the manner in which Miss Pollard was introduced into Washington society is entirely different from the stories in regard to her debut, which, it is claimed, originated from the widow of the late Governor Blackburn.

The colonel denies having been the power that made Miss Pollard a welcome guest at the best gatherings at the capital. Col. Breckinridge explains the matter in this way: He says that while the widow of a distinguished admiral was visiting the inmates of a house of visitation in Washington she met Miss Pollard.

By the use of her splendid conversational powers Miss Pollard succeeded in attracting the attention and at the same time engaging the interest and the friendship of the admiral's widow. She invited Miss Pollard to her home and introduced her to several members of the Bayard family. They in turn presented her to a number of society people, and soon the ambitious young woman had the entire to the most exclusive circles of Washington society.

Mrs. Ketchum, at whose house Miss Pollard boarded while in Lexington, says that Colonel Breckinridge once took rooms there, remaining three or four weeks, but he and the girl never appeared much in each other's company.
